About The Club at Gateway Golf Course

The Club at Gateway officially opened on January 1, 1989. It was envisioned as the centerpiece to the new Westinghouse Gateway Development. World-renowned architect Tom Fazio was commissioned to design the golf course to ensure the highest quality experience.

The course debuted on the Golf Digest list of Top 100 Courses in its inaugural season. This recognition earned Gateway the privilege of hosting the 1990 Ben Hogan Tour Gateway Open, won by Ted Tryba, and the 1991 Ben Hogan Tour Gateway Open, won by Gary McCord—his only professional victory until he became a winner on the Champions Tour in 1999. The Club has also hosts numerous USGA qualifiers and PGA chapter and section events, including the 2008 Callaway Golf State Pro-Assistant event, which was previously hosted by the venerable TPC @ Sawgrass.

In the summer of 2013, Tom Fazio returned to oversee improvements including re-grassing of the course with "Celebration Bermuda" and the greens with "TifEagle" hybrid turf. Drainage, cart paths, and bunkers were improved. Additionally, another famous course architect, Ron Garl, was brought in to redesign the driving range into a trendsetting "Golf Improvement Practice Facility."

The Club was rebranded The Club at Gateway in 2018. In July of 2019, an over $5 million renovation project took place and the Clubhouse construction began on the new 300 seat dining facility. A new second-level fitness center with separate spin and aerobics rooms and new cardio, weight, and TRX training equipment. The new resort-style pool features a zero-entry area, water features, lap lanes and a 16 seat outdoor bar. The new display exhibition kitchen is equipped with a wood-burning pizza oven. Another first-class feature is the 1,600 bottle glass wine cellar in the lobby area and a private wine room for dining and entertaining.

About The Club at Gateway

The Club at Gateway is a private 20-hole facility. Our fantastic Tom Fazio Signature Course regularly receives accolades as one of the finest layouts and has the best greens in Florida.
